

MONKEY SHIT INU WHITEPAPER

Introduction

Since the creation of the first piece of dog shit meme coin back in 2013, there have been numerous attempts to create a project that would attract new investors to crypto while having fun and teaching newcomers about the fucking incredible possibilities that exist when investing in crypto.

Over the past 11 years, a shit-ton of attempts have been made to create projects that would bring attention to the opportunities that await in cryptocurrency. As the popularity of crypto grew, countless fuckers continued to flow in with the hopes of catching that one project that would set them on the path to financial freedom. Many of these projects became well-known meme coins that brought about wealth and freed many people from the daily grind they felt they were destined for forever. At the same time, many individuals invested in projects where they lost considerable amounts of money as they invested in projects that eventually became known as shitcoins, where greedy developers created projects that had little to no value nor an immediate, discernable purpose.

Throughout meme coin history, two particular mascots became synonymous with meme coin projects: the monkey and an Inu dog. While these two were once enemies, as they competed in projects that experienced both success and failures, they recently joined forces to create the ultimate project and work together to conquer all other fucking shitcoins that are out there. Welcome to Monkey Shit Inu!

The Backstory behind Monkey Shit Inu

The name Monkey Shit Inu and the narrative behind it were made back in the early part of 2022 when Pablo would use the term Monkey Shit Inu to make fun of meme coins. Pablo always told people that he would eventually launch the project, bringing us to the present day, where Monkey Shit Inu has become an actual working token.

For those who might be somewhat confused and don't know the complete backstory behind this, there was a time when dogs and monkeys didn't get along, and with the narrative that is going on today with a frog, the monkeys and the dogs have joined forces to reclaim the space.

Founder: Pablo CRO

In 2015, from the fucking jungles deep within the cryptosphere arose an individual who would soon become synonymous with various successful cryptocurrency projects, Pablo CRO.

Upon being introduced to Bitcoin, Pablo questioned it as it didn't fucking make sense to him as to how a digital coin could be the future of finances when he couldn't touch it, see it, and it was something that the governments didn't control. But it didn't fucking matter to him that he didn't fully understand it; all he understood was that he was tired of being in the fucking rat race and that he was searching and looking for something greater than what he currently had. With little to zero actual knowledge of crypto, he bought his first Bitcoin for $500. This purchase initiated a fire inside him to devote the time it took to study cryptocurrency and build an understanding of what it is, how it works, where in hell it came from, its mystical creator, Satoshi, and all these complex issues that often deter people from staying the course. Even while remaining confused at times, he stuck around, and little by little, he slowly started to gain the understanding and knowledge he had longed for.

In December 2018, Pablo's life changed when he found himself in a unique position as the stars aligned when a token called CRO came into his life. Upon researching it, discovering that the exchange Crypto.com was behind it, and then seeing the branding built around it, everything slowly started to make sense. He decided to load up and accumulate as much as possible while continuing to add to his Bitcoin bag. Then, in 2020, he discovered the Shiba Inu token and decided to buy into the project. He also decided to buy Dogecoin and add it to his portfolio. Before he knew it, the bullrun of 2021 was pumping and fucking going crazy and for the first time, he saw seven figures in his wallet. This changed everything. It changed his future, his trajectory, his destiny, as everything about cryptocurrency suddenly made sense and proved that he had worked his ass off for was happening. Right after Shib, he discovered other projects, allowing him to jump into Saitama and Shibnobi, and he bought a bunch of other coins, which allowed him to walk away from the best bullrun ever as a successful man

Even after experiencing great success, he decided to stick around, which led him to come across Volt Inu, which at the time was nothing more than a complete shitcoin. He took the time to look into Volt and decided it could be something. He made the concise decision to put his energy, time, and effort into working side-by-side with its developers so they could build something great. Before he knew it, the Volt Inu project hit the 250 million dollar market cap. This feat proved to him a properly built project's true power and potential. While continuing to work on Volt, even during the brutal bear market, he decided to continue accumulating as much Volt Inu as he could, as he already knew the possibilities that crypto brings to someone's life.

Pablo's message to the crypto community is that this upcoming bullrun is a time that will fucking change many people's lives forever and he invites you to join the Monkey Shit Inu community and have some fun while learning more about the potential impact cryptocurrency can have on one's life.
